Confidential Disclosure Agreement or Non-Disclosure Agreement (CDA/NDA)

is a contract that governs the disclosure or proprietary information from one party to another.

The agreement defines the terms of the disclosure and obligations of the parties. The inventor signs the CDA to:

- a. Provide technical information to a patent officer of the Institute in the evaluation of the invention to determine patentability and for the drafting of patent application;
- b. Protect the invention when disclosed to a third party or an external researcher associated within a company or other profit organizations; and
- c. Prevent the recipient of the information from using the invention for any other purposes than to evaluate it.
